15 Respondent.) FOR STAY AND ABEYANCE

17 This Report and Recommendation is submitted to United States 18 District Judge Dana M. Sabraw pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b) and Local 19 Civil Rules 72.1(d) and HC.2 of the United States District Court for 20 the Southern District of California. Currently before the Court is 21 a motion to stay and abey federal proceedings while Petitioner James 22 H. Cunningham, a state prisoner proceeding pro se, exhausts his claims 23 in state court. Doc. No. 19, Ex. H ("Mot. to Stay"). For the reasons 24 discussed below, the Court recommends that Petitioner's request for 25 stay and abeyance be DENIED.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

2 This is Petitioner's second federal petition for habeas corpus.
3 Petitioner filed the first petition in the Southern District of 4 California in September 2006 and, upon learning that he was required 5 to exhaust his claims in the state system before presenting them in 6 federal court, moved to dismiss the petition in November 2006.
7 Cunningham v. Clay, 06cv2168-JM (CAB) ("Fed. Pet. 1"). After the 8 district judge dismissed the petition, Petitioner presented his claims 9 to the California Supreme Court, and upon that court's denial, filed 10 the instant case on November 23, 2007. ("Pet.")

Petitioner's 2007 petition presented the following claims:

(1) the trial court violated Petitioner's due process rights when it prevented him from presenting evidence impeaching a prosecution witness' credibility; (2) the trial court violated Petitioner's right to confront witnesses when it prohibited him from cross-examining an adverse witness; (3) the trial court erred when it denied Petitioner's request to instruct the jury on possession of a firearm for self-defense; and (4) the trial court erred when it gave the statutory flight instruction over the defense's objection. Pet. at 6-9.

Although presented in a different manner, these claims are effectively identical to those contained in the 2006 federal petition.

22 The same day he filed the 2007 petition, Petitioner filed a 23 Motion for Stay and Abeyance of Federal Habeas Corpus Petition to 24 Exhaust Additional Unexhausted Claims in the State Courts. Doc. No.
25 3. The District Judge denied this motion without prejudice, because 26 Petitioner failed to specify the claims he was seeking to exhaust.
27 Doc. No. 5. On January 9, 2008, Petitioner filed a renewed motion to 28 stay and abey the federal proceedings. Doc. No. 12. Because

1 Petitioner had again neglected to identify the claims he was seeking 2 to exhaust, the Magistrate Judge¹ denied the motion without prejudice.
 3 Doc. No. 15.

4 On March 7, 2008, Petitioner filed the currently-operative first 5 amended petition. Doc. No. 19 ("FAP"). In the amended petition, 6 Petitioner re-asserts the claims contained in the original petition,² 7 and presents the following new grounds for relief. (FAP pt. 2, at 50-8 68). In Ground One, he argues that the trial court erred when it
 9 (a) instructed the jury with CALJIC 17.01, which permitted the jury 10 to convict Petitioner of charges not previously alleged (id. pt. 1, 11 at 8-16), (b) failed to correctly instruct the jury on general intent 12 and the definition of assault (id. pt. 1, at 7, 19-23), (c) failed to 13 sua sponte instruct the jury that the general intent instruction also 14 applied to the allegation of personal use of a firearm (id. pt. 1, at 15 24-27), (d) failed to instruct the jury on lesser-included offenses 16 relating to the firearm-use allegation (id. pt. 1, at 28-35), 17 (e) refused to instruct the jury on California Penal Code section 417, 18 brandishing a firearm, as a lesser-included offense of assault with 19 a firearm (id. pt. 1, at 36-44), and (f) instructed the jury with 20 CALJIC 2.02 rather than CALJIC 2.01, relating to the use of 21 circumstantial evidence (id. pt. 1, at 45-55). Petitioner also 22 alleges that his appellate counsel rendered ineffective assistance by 23 failing to raise any of these instructional errors on appeal. (See 24 id. pt. 1, at 7, 8, 24, 28, 36, 45.)

 26 ¹This case originally was assigned to Magistrate Judge Ruben B. Brooks, and was transferred to this Court on August 8, 2008. Doc. No. 35.

27 ²Cunningham's FAP is lengthy, and was thus divided into two parts before being 28 electronically scanned and placed on the docket. As a result, the document is not consecutively paginated. Accordingly, the Court will cite to the FAP by referring to "part 1" or "part 2," and the page number provided on the docket.

1 In Ground Two of the FAP, Petitioner contends that the prosecutor 2 wrongfully excluded African-Americans from the jury, and that the 3 trial court erred in denying the defense's motion for a mistrial based 4 on this exclusion. (Id. pt. 1, at 58-61.) Here, too, he argues 5 ineffective assistance of counsel for his attorney's failure to raise 6 the claim on appeal. (Id.)

7 Ground Three alleges ineffective assistance of trial counsel 8 based on Petitioner's attorney's (a) failure to object to the 9 provision of CALJIC 2.02, concerning the sufficiency of circumstantial 10 evidence to prove intent, (b) failure to request an instruction that 11 the definitions of assault and general intent applied to the lesser-12 included offense of simple assault, (c) failure to request an 13 instruction that the definition of general intent applied equally to 14 the firearm-use allegation, (d) failure to request an instruction on 15 lesser-included offenses related to the firearm-use allegation, 16 (e) failure to request the court to instruct the jury with a modified 17 version of CALJIC 2.52 regarding flight from police, (f) failure to 18 move to suppress evidence seized from Petitioner's home, and 19 (g) failure to object to the use of CALJIC 17.01. (Id. pt. 2, at 2-20 48.)

21 Petitioner admits that Grounds One, Two, and Three of the FAP 22 have not been exhausted in state court. Mot. to Stay at 1. However, 23 on March 3, 2008, Petitioner filed a habeas corpus petition presenting 24 the unexhausted claims to the California Supreme Court. Doc. No. 25 25 (Opposition to Motion to Stay and Abey "Opp'n") at 3 & n.2. This 26 petition has not yet been adjudicated. Petitioner subsequently filed 27 the motion to stay and abey currently before this Court, requesting 28 that his federal petition be stayed pending resolution of the petition

1 before the California Supreme Court. Mot. to Stay. In support, 2 Petitioner argues that because he only recently became aware of the 3 new claims, and because he suffers from mental health disorders and 4 only has an elementary education, good cause exists for his failure
5 to previously exhaust his claims. Id. at 2.

6 On April 16, 2008, Respondent filed an opposition to Petitioner's 7 motion to stay, arguing that Petitioner does not show good cause for 8 his failure to exhaust, and that the motion to stay must therefore be 9 denied. Opp'n at 4-5. Petitioner did not file a reply.

10 DISCUSSION

11 I. LEGAL STANDARD

12 A federal court may not consider a petition for habeas corpus 13 unless the petitioner first has presented his claims to the state 14 courts, thereby "exhausting" them. 28 U.S.C.A. § 2254(b)(1)(A); Rose 15 v. Lundy, 455 U.S. 509, 522 (1982). The exhaustion requirement is 16 founded on federal-state comity, as only when the state court has been 17 presented with the claim may it "pass on and correct alleged 18 violations of its prisoners' federal rights." Duncan v. Henry, 513 19 U.S. 364, 365 (1995) (per curiam) (quotes and citations omitted).

20 Pursuant to the Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act
21 ("AEDPA"), all federal habeas petitions are subject to a one-year 22 statute of limitations, and claims not exhausted and presented to the 23 federal court within the one-year period are forfeited. 28 U.S.C.
24 § 2244(d). When a petition for habeas corpus contains both exhausted 25 and unexhausted claims, the petitioner may return to state court to 26 exhaust the remaining claims. Rhines v. Weber, 544 U.S. 269, 277
27 (2005). However, the AEDPA statute is not tolled by the filing of a 28 federal habeas petition (id.), so a federal petitioner seeking to 1 return to state court to exhaust claims must do so and subsequently 2 re-present the newly-exhausted claims within the one-year period 3 (Rhines, 544 U.S. at 277). This is not always possible, and in such 4 situations petitioners "run the risk of forever losing their 5 opportunity for any federal review of their unexhausted claims."

6 Rhines, 544 U.S. at 275.

7 To permit petitioners to exhaust their claims without running 8 afoul of the statute of limitations, the Supreme Court determined that 9 petitioners may request a stay of their petition pending resolution 10 of the unexhausted claims in state court. Id. at 276-278. However, 11 "a stay and abeyance should be available only in limited 12 circumstances, and is appropriate only when the district court 13 determines that there was good cause for the failure to exhaust."
14 Jackson v. Roe, 425 F.3d 654, 661 (9th Cir. 2005) (applying Rhines 15 standard). In addition to "good cause," a petitioner must show that 16 his unexhausted claims are "potentially meritorious," and that there 17 is "no indication that the petitioner engaged in intentionally 18 dilatory litigation tactics." Rhines, 544 U.S. at 278. These 19 safeguards are necessary to ensure that the stay and abeyance
20 procedure does not frustrate AEDPA's twin purposes of reducing delays 21 in the execution of state and federal criminal sentences and of 22 encouraging petitioners to fully exhaust their claims before filing 23 in federal court. Jackson, 425 F.3d at 660.

24 Neither the Supreme Court nor the Ninth Circuit have defined what 25 constitutes "good cause" for failure to exhaust a claim, and, until 26 very recently, the Ninth Circuit merely had opined that good cause 27 requires something less than a showing of "extraordinary 28 circumstances." Jackson, 425 F.3d at 662. However, in August 2008,

1 the Ninth Circuit analyzed the standard in Wooten v. Kirkland, – F.3d
 2 –, 2008 WL 3905044 (9th Cir. 2008). In Wooten, petitioner's attorney
 3 filed direct appeals in the state court of appeal and the California 4 Supreme Court, both of which were denied. Id. at *1. Although 5 petitioner was "under the impression" that his counsel presented all 6 claims at both levels of appeal, one claim was in fact omitted from 7 the state supreme court petition. Id.

8 On federal habeas review, the district court held that the 9 omitted claim was not exhausted. Id. at *2. The court denied 10 petitioner's motion to stay and abey the case while he returned to 11 state court, holding that petitioner's failure to realize he had an 12 unexhausted claim did not constitute good cause. Id. The Ninth 13 Circuit upheld the district court's decision, stating that:

14 To accept that a petitioner's "impression" that a claim had 15 been included in an appellate brief constitutes "good cause" would render stay-and-abeyance orders routine.

16 ... Additionally, were we to endorse such a broad 17 interpretation of "good cause" that allowed for routine 18 stays of mixed petitions, we would also be undermining the 19 goals of AEDPA. In authorizing stays of habeas petitions 20 only in "limited circumstances," Rhines explicitly 21 acknowledges AEDPA's dual purposes: to reduce delays in 22 executing state and federal criminal sentences and to 23 streamline federal habeas proceedings by increasing a 24 petitioner's incentive to exhaust all claims in state
 25 court. Stays, however, delay the execution of sentences 26 and reduce a petitioner's incentive to exhaust all claims 27 in state court. See [Rhines] at 277 ("Stay and abeyance, 28 if employed too frequently, has the potential to undermine [AEDPA's] twin purposes.")

29
 30 Id. at *3 (footnote and citation omitted).

31 In declining to adopt a "broad interpretation" (id.) of good 32 cause, the court moved away from the more liberal standards previously 33 enunciated by some district courts, and re-emphasized that motions to 34 stay only would be granted in "limited circumstances." Compare id.

1 (good cause not found when petitioner mistakenly believed that his 2 attorney exhausted all claims), and Riner v. Crawford, 415 F.Supp.2d 3 1207, 1210 (D.Nev. 2006) (good cause may be found when a petitioner 4 shows "he was prevented from raising the claim, either by his own 5 ignorance or confusion about the law or the status of the case").³

6 When a petitioner shows good cause for his failure to exhaust, 7 presents potentially meritorious claims, and demonstrates that he has 8 not engaged in dilatory litigation tactics, "it likely would be an 9 abuse of discretion for a district court to deny a stay." Rhines, 544 10 U.S. at 278. "In such a case, the petitioner's interest in obtaining 11 federal review of his claims outweighs the competing interests in 12 finality and speedy resolution of federal petitions." Id.

13 II. GOOD CAUSE

14 Petitioner argues that good cause exists for his failure to 15 exhaust his claims because his appellate counsel failed to raise the 16 claims on direct appeal, because he suffers from "mental health 17 disorders," and because he has an elementary-level education. Mot.
 18 to Stay at 2. Petitioner argues that he only was made aware of the 19 unexhausted claims when Elliot Griffin, a fellow inmate who has been 20 assisting him, brought them to his attention. Id. at 2.

21 Accompanying Petitioner's motion to stay is a declaration by 22 Griffin, who states that he first met with Petitioner in October 2007, 23 and after reviewing Petitioner's trial transcripts, he found several

24
 25 ³District courts in the Ninth Circuit typically have applied one of two tests 26 for "good cause." The first test requires a "petitioner to show 'some objective 27 factor external to the petitioner' which prevented timely exhaustion," while the 28 second "equate[s] the good cause standard to 'excusable neglect.'" Smith v.
Giurbino, 2008 WL 80983 at *4 (S.D.Cal.) (citing Johnson v. Sullivan, 2006 WL 3707 at *3 (C.D. Cal.) and Corjasso v. Ayers, 2006 WL 618380 (E.D. Cal.)). While the Court questions the continued validity of these tests in light of Wooten and Rhines, for the reasons set forth in this Report and Recommendation, the Court finds that Plaintiff has not established the requisite good cause under either test.

1 arguable issues that had not been raised on appeal. FAP Ex. G.
 2 Griffin declares that he investigated the matter and drafted the FAP 3 on Cunningham's behalf. Id. He further declares that Cunningham has 4 an elementary grade education, with particular difficulty reading and 5 comprehending what he reads, and that Petitioner suffers from mental 6 disorders. Id. The declaration is supplemented with a prison report
 7 reflecting that when he was tested on August 17, 2006, Petitioner's 8 reading and language skills were at a sixth-grade level. Id.

9 Respondent opposes Petitioner's motion to stay, arguing that 10 neither Petitioner's lack of education nor the alleged ineffectiveness 11 of his appellate counsel constitute good cause. Opp'n 4-5.
 12 Respondent also contends that Petitioner has failed to show sufficient 13 diligence in pursuing his claims. Id. at 5. Respondent does not 14 address the potential merit of Petitioner's unexhausted claims or 15 whether Petitioner engaged in dilatory litigation tactics. Id.

16 A. AEDPA's Purposes

17 Stay and abeyance pending exhaustion of claims in state court is 18 only available in "limited circumstances" where the petitioner shows 19 good cause for his failure to previously exhaust. Rhines, 544 U.S.
 20 at 277. The paramount concern in considering a motion to stay is 21 adherence to AEDPA's twin objectives of encouraging petitioners to 22 "seek relief from state courts in the first instance" and "reduc[ing] 23 delays in the execution of state and federal criminal sentences." Id.
 24 at 276; Wooten, 2008 WL 3905044 at *3. In light of these objectives, 25 Petitioner's arguments for his failure to exhaust his claims do not 26 constitute good cause.

27 Granting the instant motion to stay would directly contradict
 28 AEDPA's goal of encouraging petitioners to exhaust their claims

1 without returning to state court. In 2006, the district court clearly 2 informed petitioner of the exhaustion requirement stating that "[t]o 3 exhaust state judicial remedies, a California state prisoner must 4 present the California Supreme Court with a fair opportunity to rule 5 on the merits of every issue raised in his or her federal habeas 6 petition. The petitioner must have raised the very same federal 7 claims brought in the federal petition before the state supreme 8 court." Fed. Pet. 1, Doc. No. 2 at 1. (citations omitted) (emphasis 9 in original).

10 Thereafter, Petitioner dismissed his federal petition and, armed 11 with knowledge of the exhaustion requirement and all of the facts that 12 underlie both his exhausted and unexhausted claims, returned to state 13 court and exhausted several claims. To stay his petition while he 14 presents claims to the California Supreme Court for a second time 15 would contravene AEDPA's purpose of encouraging petitioners to "seek 16 relief from state courts in the first instance." Rhines, 544 U.S. at 17 276.

18 B. Counsel's Failure to Raise the Claims on Direct Appeal

19 Petitioner argues that his counsel's failure to raise the new 20 claims on direct appeal constitutes good cause for the subsequent 21 failure to exhaust. Mot. to Stay at 2 ("Petitioner could not with due 22 diligence present these unexhausted claims in the State Court based 23 on the fact that the appellate counsel should have raised these 24 several arguable issues on direct appeal"). This argument is 25 unavailing.

26 As the Ninth Circuit recently reiterated, counsel's failure to 27 raise an issue on direct appeal does not constitute good cause for 28 petitioner's failure to present the claim to the state courts on

1 habeas review. Wooten, 2008 WL 3905044 at *3; see also Hernandez v 2 Sullivan, 397 F.Supp.2d 1205, 1207 (C.D.Cal. 2005) ("[T]he alleged 3 failure of Petitioner's appellate counsel to raise the unexhausted
 4 claims ... does not establish 'good cause.' Appellate counsel's 5 alleged failure did nothing to prevent Petitioner from seeking state 6 habeas relief for the unexhausted claims"). This argument therefore 7 does not provide the requisite "good cause." This is especially true 8 in the instant case where Petitioner filed a state habeas petition 9 asserting several claims.

10 C. Petitioner's Mental Condition and Education

11 Petitioner argues that he suffers from "mental health disorders" 12 and only has an elementary grade education, and that these conditions 13 constitute good cause for his failure to exhaust. Mot. to Stay at 2.
 14 After a careful review of the record, and particularly Petitioner's 15 medical reports, the Court does not find support for these arguments.

16 On October 16, 2006, the district court informed Petitioner of 17 the exhaustion requirement, and, shortly thereafter, Petitioner moved 18 to dismiss his first federal petition in order to return to state 19 court. Fed. Pet. 1, Doc. Nos. 2 & 4. After presenting claims to the 20 California Supreme Court, on November 13, 2007, Petitioner 21 concurrently filed his second petition in federal court and moved to 22 stay the new proceedings so he could return again to state court to 23 exhaust more claims. Doc. Nos. 1 & 3. The period between October 16, 24 2006 (when Petitioner first was alerted to the exhaustion requirement) 25 and November 13, 2007 (when he returned to federal court and filed his 26 first motion to stay) is the time during which it is indisputable that 27 Petitioner was both aware of the exhaustion requirement and able to 28 exhaust his claims without court intervention. This is thus the

1 relevant time period for evaluating Petitioner's mental capacity as 2 it relates to the pending motion.

3 Although doctors state that Petitioner is depressed (see, e.g., 4 Doc. No. 10 at 70, Doc. No. 23-4 at 8) and that he suffers from 5 "psychosis"⁴ (see, e.g., Doc. No. 10 at 70), the evidence indicates 6 that Petitioner was able to function normally during this time. In 7 numerous reports created during the relevant period, Petitioner is 8 described as "doing fine with no problems to report" (Doc. No. 10 at 9 32, 36, 39, Doc. No. 10-4 at 41, 49), "basically doing very well" 10 (Doc. No. 10-4 at 47), and "in no acute mental distress" (Doc. No. 10-11 4 at 43, 48, Doc. No. 10 at 38). See also Doc. No. 10-2 at 10 (July 12 2007 report that Petitioner "[h]as started class, enjoying it a lot, 13 interested in learning, happy to be productive").

14 Further, in January 2007, Petitioner's "intellectual functioning, 15 concentration, attention" and "memory" were rated as normal. Doc. No.
 16 10 at 71. Petitioner also scored a sixty-four on the "Global 17 Assessment of Functioning" scale (id. at 72), which "reflects mild 18 symptoms or 'some difficulty' in the areas of social or occupational 19 functioning, but the individual 'generally functions pretty well.'" 20 Doc. No. 34 (order denying Petitioner's motion for appointment of 21 counsel or guardian ad litem) (quoting Sims v. Barnhart, 309 F.3d 424, 22 427 (7th Cir. 2002) (citation omitted)); see also Doc. No. 10-4 at 1 23 (doctor's statement that Petitioner is "[d]oing well in school").

24 Additionally, Petitioner's argument that mental health problems 25 prevented him from exhausting his claims are not consistent with his 26 ⁴The nature of Petitioner's "psychosis" is never explained. However, it 27 appears that it concerns a fear of being hurt by fellow inmates, who "jumped" him 28 at least once. See Doc. No. 10 at 29 (petitioner's statement to doctor that "... I have a lot of paranoia. I was jumped at another prison by a couple of guys and I think it's going to happen again"); see also id. at 71.

1 litigation history thus far. Upon learning of the exhaustion
 2 requirement, Petitioner presented the state court with a habeas 3 petition containing four claims. Clearly, he was able to comprehend 4 the need to exhaust and to select those claims he wished to present.⁵ 5 Petitioner's psychological condition therefore does not constitute 6 good cause for his failure to exhaust.

7 Finally, the Court is not persuaded by Petitioner's argument that 8 his alleged elementary-level education is good cause for his failure 9 to exhaust. Mot. to Stay at 2. First, many state prisoners have not 10 attended school beyond the elementary level, and to accept this as 11 "good cause" "would render stay-and-abey-orders routine." Wooten, 12 2008 WL 3905044 at *3 (emphasizing that stay orders only be granted 13 in "limited circumstances"). Second, it is not entirely clear that 14 Petitioner's education did not extend beyond elementary school. In 15 January 2007, Petitioner informed a doctor that he has a GED and 16 attended San Diego State College. Doc. No. 10 at 70. Petitioner 17 therefore fails to demonstrate good cause on these grounds as well.

18 Because Petitioner fails to show good cause for his failure to 19 exhaust the new claims, the Court need not consider the whether his 20 arguments are "plainly meritless" or whether Petitioner engaged in 21 "intentionally dilatory litigation tactics." Wooten, 2008 WL 3905044 22 at *3. The Court therefore RECOMMENDS that Petitioner's motion to 23 stay and abey be DENIED.

27 ⁵Petitioner filed his first state habeas petition in April 2007, and at that 28 time was acting without the assistance of fellow-inmate Griffin. See FAP Ex. G at 2 (Declaration by Griffin stating he met Petitioner in October 2007). Despite the fact that Petitioner is currently receiving assistance, he has thus demonstrated the ability to litigate independently as well.

CONCLUSION

2 For these reasons, the Court recommends that the district court
3 DENY Petitioner's request to hold his Amended Petition in abeyance 4 pending state court exhaustion of Grounds One, Two, and Three.

This Report and Recommendation is submitted to the United States District Court judge assigned to this case, pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). Any party may file written objections with the district court and serve a copy on all parties on or before September 26, 2008. The document should be captioned "Objections to Report and Recommendation." Any reply to the objections shall be served and filed on or before October 10, 2008. The parties are advised that failure to file objections within the specified time may waive the right to appeal the district court's order. Martinez v. Ylst, 951 F.2d 1153, 1157 (9th Cir. 1991).
